

Few healthy people understand what it is like to have a physical disability. They take for granted daily activities that often require extensive planning and effort for the disabled. For some, simply getting dressed in the morning may take an hour or more. Imagine then, the difficulty and frustration of disabled people who love the outdoors, who yearn to hunt, fish, camp, or take a simple outing to their favorite lake, stream, or meadow.

Over the years, the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks has provided more opportunities each year for the state's disabled sportsmen and women. From the first handicapped-accessible restroom in a state park to the current disabled/youth deer season and special hunts designed for the disabled, the department offers a number of options for the disabled to enjoy the outdoors.

And these opportunities are about more than hunting, fishing, and parks. They help people with physical disabilities to build relationships with others, realize they are accepted by able-bodied folks, and learn where they can do things to stay active. Ultimately, it's about finding the faith and courage to nurture one's life.

Keeping the Spirit Alive

Options for disabled hunters and anglers

For many Kansans, hunting and fishing are their passions, but when disability strikes, the hunter or angler faces special challenges in the outdoors. To ensure that all individuals enjoy high-quality opportunities, the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks offers a variety of alternatives to accommodate the needs of disabled citizens.

One of those opportunities involves special permits. There are three different permit categories for disabled hunters, and one of these applies to fishermen, as well. These free permits are designed to give disabled persons the opportunity to hunt or fish although they must still purchase hunting and fishing licenses and other permits or stamps required, unless exempt by law (such as being a resident 15 or younger or 65 or older).

Other opportunities include special facilities or access to generally-restricted areas.

Hunt-From-Vehicle Permit

This permit is available to anyone who qualifies for a handicap vehicle placard. Those with severe visual impairments, who cannot walk without an orthopedic device, who must use portable oxygen, or have a class III or IV cardiac condition are eligible for this permit. The disability can be a permanent or temporary condition.

Applications are available by contacting a KDWP office listed in this brochure. The application must be completed and signed by a licensed medical practitioner. The permit is free and is issued through regional offices. Anyone who has a handicapped identification placard issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles is exempt from this process. The permit or placard allows the holder to hunt and shoot from a motorized vehicle. Contact KDWP's Law Enforcement Division at 620-672-5911 for more information.

Disability Assistance Permit

A Disability Assistance Permit allows persons who are physically incapable of pulling the trigger or reeling in a fish to designate another person to do this for them. The application is available through the Pratt Operations Office and also requires certification by a licensed medical or optical practitioner. There is no fee for the permit.

Fishing and Boating Docks

All boating and fishing docks currently being built in the state are designed to accommodate disabled boaters and fishermen. While most such docks are designed for boaters, disabled anglers often use them. A few docks in the state are designed specifically to accommodate the disabled angler.

Waterfowl Hunting

Although KDWP currently maintains only one disability-accessible waterfowl blind in the state – at Cheyenne Bottoms – special allowances are made for disabled waterfowl hunters during special hunts and in some areas. These can include accommodations such as allowing disabled hunters to use a vehicle or area not otherwise allowed.

Other Accommodations

State regulation allows a person to assist a disabled hunter, without doing the actual shooting. A disabled permit holder may designate someone to assist in pursuing and retrieving a big game animal harvested by the disabled hunter. There is no permit required for persons providing such assistance to a disabled big game hunter, but the assisting individual must possess a hunting license.

KDWP is also working to help disabled sportsmen and women through a special youth/disabled deer hunting season in late September. During the youth/disabled deer season, only youth 16 or younger and those who qualify for a Disability Assistance Permit may hunt.

A few special hunts for disabled persons are occasionally held throughout the state at different times of the year, often through volunteer organizations assisted by KDWP staff. These events help disabled hunters with everything from getting into the field to field dressing game. Check with the nearest KDWP office for information.

In addition to these programs, KDWP has a specially-built hydraulic lift deer blind donated to the department by the Paralyzed Veterans of America. The blind is available on a first-come, first served basis to volunteer or conservation groups to use when conducting disabled hunts. This is a wheelchair-accessible device that provides a comfortable enclosure that can be elevated to 19 feet.
