

MILFORD

The Milford Dam is operated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE). The reservoir has a surface area of 15,700 acres and an average depth of about 25 feet making it Kansas' largest reservoir.

Numerous camping and picnicking areas are maintained by the Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks, USACE, and the cities of Wakefield and Milford. Two privately-owned marinas are located on the lake, providing services for boaters and anglers.

Approximately 18,000 acres of public land surrounds Milford Reservoir on the west side and the upper end. This land is managed to support various wildlife species.

Numerous opportunities exist for those who wish to observe or photograph wildlife on the area. The abundant and diverse habitat is home to many nongame birds, mammals, reptiles, and aquatic life.

About the Park

Milford State Park is a 1,084-acre multipurpose recreation area located at the southeast end of Milford Reservoir.

Wildlife

Many game species are present on Milford Wildlife Area. Known mainly for its quail and pheasant populations, the area also has huntable populations of turkey, deer, dove, squirrel, coyote, cottontail rabbits, prairie chicken, ducks, and geese. Though populations fluctuate from year to year, all of these species provide hunters with a challenging outdoor experience.

A permanent 1,103-acre wildlife refuge has been established on the northern end of the reservoir for waterfowl management. The public hunting areas and the refuge are clearly posted.

Milford Wildlife Area also provides thousands of acres for wildlife viewing by hikers and other area users.

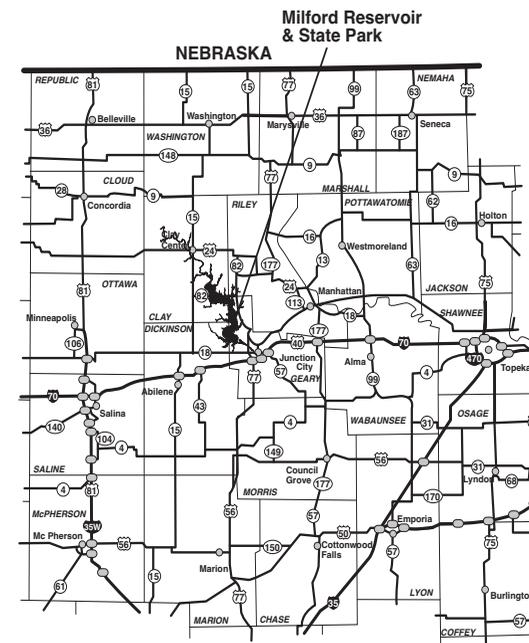

Things to Remember

Shower buildings are available at Woodland Hills, Cedar Point, Walnut Grove, and Prairie View Campgrounds.

Don't forget to visit the Milford Nature Center and Fish Hatchery, located below the dam.
